1939 Midwest Centennial Baseball Tournament

Conducted By

American Sports Association, Inc.

726 WABASH AVENUE

TERRE HAUTE, INDIANA

MORDECAI "THREE FINGER" BROWN
High Commissioner

The 1939 Midwest Centennial Baseball Tournament undoubtedly provided the greatest opportunity for semi-pro baseball clubs ever offered in the midwest.

The financial returns to the clubs, the enthusiastic interest and attendance exceeded any sectional tournament ever held in the United States.

The Midwest Baseball Tournament has no connection with any other tournament. It was a sixteen-team invitational tournament, and the winner is the undisputed champion of the midwest. The championship went to the fighting Brazil Black Beauty Blocks. They won three straight games in the final five-game series.

All previous attendance records were smashed, thus gaining the attention of organized baseball leaders from coast to coast. Following is the four-year record of attendance:

1936	13,807
1937	24,159
1938	43,705
1939	70,403

This attendance figure of 1939 exceeds the population of Terre Haute, which is 62,810. It completely overshadowed the great record of 43,705 established by the 1938 Indiana State Tournament, which was the most successful tournament held in America that year.

The sixteen clubs participating this year were from five states, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Missouri and Kentucky.

Mordecai "Three Finger" Brown was made High Commissioner of the 1939 Midwest Centennial Baseball Tournament. His appointment is a permanent one. On August 7th, executives of major and minor leagues and veterans of the baseball world, joined in a "Mordecai Brown Night" to pay tribute to this immortal pitcher. The occasion was the opening of the final championship series between Brazil and Lafayette, and a crowd of 9,000 people jammed Memorial Stadium to make the biggest crowd ever to attend a baseball game in Terre Haute.

The outstanding success of the tournament this year was more than ever before the result of the combined interest of newspapers, radio, business initiative and individual enthusiasm. It gave Terre Haute and the Wabash Valley all the thrills of high-grade baseball, and established this as a permanent baseball structure.

Already officials of the AMERICAN SPORTS ASSOCIATION are preparing the program for 1940. The clubs and the fans of the midwest have accepted the tournament as a permanent thing. They recognize it as a stable and powerful influence in developing players and stimulating better baseball for the future, in this area.

Daddy Nehf Sees Son Artie Hit Two Homers and Win Own Game

Travels 1,000 Miles With Giants For Big Day of His Life—Here's Account of Interest To T. H. Fans

Charles T. Nehf, of North Eighth street, father of Art Nehf, Giants' southpaw, is with the New York club, having the time of his life. The elder Nehf joined the Giants when they passed through Terre Haute on their way to St. Louis and is still with them. Gotham scribes are "playing up" Art's dad daily in their columns and some interesting accounts have been published. Appended is one written by Bozeman Bulger, which tells of Art's feat of exploding two homers in one game, in addition to puzzling St. Louis. (Editor's Note).

By Bozeman Bulger.

Scene: Box in rear of press stand at Polo Grounds. Old gentleman, wearing, among other things, golf cap, a soft sand-colored shirt and diamond stickpin, leans over rail with hand cupped to ear. Pays no attention to fans occupying box with him. Giants playing Cardinals a rubber game. Arthur Nehf pitching.

ACT I.

First Fan (with face like old potato)—For the love of Mike, why don't they get them cockeyes out'n there. That guy can't pitch. What's McGraw tryin' to do?

Old Gent (turning round)—What do you mean—can't pitch? Why, that boy—

Second Fan (more polite)—Look at 'em. That boy's through. I believe in having a pitcher who can hit. Bentley can hit, can't he?

Old Gent—Sure he can, I'm tellin' you that—what you call him?—that cockeye, that left-hander—say, when he was a lad—

At that moment two were out and the cause looked hopeless. The score was tied.

First Fan (face reddening)—What's the use? Oh, say, look who's comin' up. Oh, wow! Help! Help!

Old Gent (indignant)—I beg pardon, young man, but do you know who that boy is?

First Fan—No, and I don't give

Old Gent—I've followed that boy since he was a day old.

Second Fan—Well, you certainly had a long trip. If he could only sock—

At this moment Arthur Nehf, the southpaw, swings from his shoestrings and the ball sails into the right field bleachers for a home run. There is a sudden interruption in the box. The old gent's cap flies over into the press box. His arms swing like a windmill. His diamond pin holds fast. His white hair waves in the breeze.

Old Gent—Hot dog! Didn't I tell ma he'd do it. Trip was worth while. Gents (he addresses the other fans), I'm twenty years younger. Hot zig-giddy!

First Fan (to second fan)—Watch that old bird. Lay off'n him. He'll go off his nut. What's the angle, anyhow?

In the meantime Arthur Nehf circled the bases. The Giants now had a lead of one run.

ACT II.

Scene: Same box, same personnel. Old man smiling. Others are too.

First Fan—I told you them southpaws kin hit sometimes, didn't I?

Old Gent—You did not. You said—why, I've a great mind to—

Second Fan—Why, what's it to you, old timer? Don't get excited.

Old Gent—I'm telling you that boy can sock. Yes and he can pitch. Yes and—

First Fan (with potato face)—Got anything bet on him? What's it to you?

Old Gent—I come one thousand miles to see this. I started in at St. Louis. Followed these Giants all the way. I was sick when I started. I'm well and happy now. Can lick my weight in automobiles. That's what—say, don't you fellows start anything. Why, I'll—

Second Fan (to potato-faced fan)—Lay off'n him. The old guy's—well—

Old Gent—Excuse me, young fellow. Last time I took a trip with a ball club was in 1884, when Pop Anson was playing and Chris Von de Ahe owned the St. Louis Club. Gee, those were the days. But, you'll excuse my excitement—

First Fan (with potato face)—Sure.

We'll excuse—but what's the idea of following a ball club like this? What's this Arthur Nehf to you?

Old Gent (choking)—What's he to me? I'm tellin' you—

It was now the sixth inning and Hank Gowdy, the war hero, walked up and smashed a two-bagger to the daisies.

First Fan—That's the way to hit 'em. But, oh, wow!—look who's up there again. Never got but one home run in his life. Lightning can't strike twice in the same place.

Old Gent (indignant)—That isn't true. He got two home runs in his life. The one awhile ago made three. That's the kind of boy he is. If I ever get back to Terre Haute, why, I'll tell—

At this moment the St. Louis pitcher laid a fast one right in the groove. Arthur Nehf, the pitcher, who had made three home runs in his life, took a swing from his shoestrings. There was a crash. He caught the ball squarely on the button. It alighted among a group of fans in the right field stand. The old gent threw his cap high in the air. It fell among the players.

Old Gent—Doggone! I told you he'd do it. Now, how many has he hit in his life? Hey, Hey (he yells to the telegraph operator), can you get Terre Haute on the wire?

First Fan—Listen, old timer, are you sick? What's the matter?

Old Gent—No time to talk now. Say, operator, can you get a message off? (Excitedly he scribbles a telegram.)

Second Fan—Old timer, got to hand it to you. You called the turn. How'd you know that left-handed pitcher could sock a home run?

Old Gent—I brought him up that way. I've followed the Giants 1,000 miles to see him do it. That cockeye pitcher, as you call him, is my son Artie. I'm old men Nehf. What do you think of that?

First and second fans duck their heads and then call the boy. They offer the old gentleman cigars.

First Fan—Of course, we was only kidding. We knew the boy could hit. He'd do that every day if he had a chance.

Old Gent—That's no joke, either. He could if he wanted to. Say, boys, I started out on this trip down in the mouth and in ill health. I began to improve at St. Louis. I've stuck ever since and—listen—Artie hasn't lost a game.

ACT III.

Manager McGraw (under the stand a few minutes later)—Say, Mr. Nehf, I reck'n you'd better make arrangements to stick with the Giants 'til the race is over. Be our guest.

Old Gent (toying with his golf cap and smiling)—It's already arranged. Mr. McGraw. I wired Ma from the game. Artie'll hit two more next time he pitches.

McGraw—You are 70, aren't you, Mr. Nehf?

Old Gent—Used to be, yes. This afternoon I'm exactly 28. If you don't think so I'll wrestle you for a quarter.

Giants leave the park, having licked the Cardinals, 5 to 2. Mr. Nehf leaves club house surrounded by the players.

Old Gent (speaking to Arthur, his son, as they climb elevated steps)—Son, if I was a little older I'll be dog-goned if I don't believe I'd start playin' golf and smokin' cigarets. I use to hit home runs like that. Great life, isn't it?

THE END.

APPRECIATION

We, the Directors, Officers, Team Managers and Players of the Catholic League, of Terre Haute, wish to take this opportunity of expressing our gratitude and sincere appreciation for the fine cooperation manifested by the business public, the clergy, the press, the various parishes, public officials and citizens, in assistance rendered in bringing the past season to a successful completion.

We are very thankful for the generosity expressed by the advertisers and those private individuals who have contributed and made possible the production of this season's book. The least that can be done is to patronize those whose advertisements appear herein and we solicit for them your every consideration.

We also wish to thank the McMillan Athletic Goods Company for the beautiful trophy donated by them to the league.

Words cannot express our gratitude to the Catholic firms and individuals who have contributed unsparingly both time and finance in making the first Catholic League Banquet held in St. Benedict's Hall on the night of September 19, 1938, a truly noteworthy success.

As we bring this past season to a close we realize the few grievances that might have existed between the teams at various times should be forgotten and forgiven. We must strive to continue the playing seasons yet to come in a spirit of sportsmanship and good fellowship, not with the thought of winning the game, but how we win the game—Play Hard, but Play Fair.
